

It is outrageous to think that you would revoke the telephone consumer protection act...I STILL get at least two or three phone calls per week from people who just disregard it; I hesitate to think how often my dinner and quiet times at home would be interrupted if this law were taken off the books. Quality of life is important. If you look at the statistics, very few of those annoying calls actually result in a sale. Thank you.